Blist Restore

Restores the buddy list and groups from a backup blist.xml file using the Data Structures library if the file is found or a chunk of it can be read. Use this plugin to load a backup blist.xml file into your buddy list or groups. The data from the.xml file (and the Data Structures library) is then loaded into your buddy list (or groups). It also contains an Advanced Module which allows some more advanced usage. Contains over 20 hours of development time into the plugin. Can be used on buddies, groups, and all. Advanced Module

Description: You can load a particular buddy or group from the blist.xml file. Support for virtual groups also exists. For example, if you have a list of friends for your computer and your pal did not include your computer name in his buddy list, you can use this plugin to do a search for the name of your pal's computer and use that as the name. What it Does: Loads information from a.xml backup of your buddy list. If the file is found in the same directory as the buddy.rlw you're loading a load of information from the file, including: Title of group/buddy Group membership Friendship level (if your buddy.rlw file is a share:) Name of share group your buddy lives in Name of your buddy ~/blist.xml~, ~/status.lst, ~/friends.lst etc. Shortcut names for group/buddy (Group Commander, etc.) This Plugin does

NOT: Load or delete any data in your buddy list Load in deleted buddies or groups. Load in groups created outside of Mucs Hacks Implemented: Data Structures This is the section where almost all of the heavy lifting is done. I've used the Data Structures library extensively as my project and some of the things it does would've been quite difficult for me to redo. It uses XML to store all the data. All of the Data is stored as an XML document and creates objects to access the data from it. There is a test function to tell if an xml document exists, and you can test for specific data or specific

What's New in the?

The BlistProvider plugin will restore your buddy list and grouplist from a backup if the backup is in our default backup folder. This plugin will support backups in the default backup folder, and all backup folders as long as you include the filename in the backup path. Unlike the BlistProvider plugin the BlistRestore plugin will not modify your buddy list and grouplist at all, this plugin simply restores it from the backup. What's new in this version: Added (read section below) Fixes for loading in corrupt and missing backups There is currently no way to restore text from a backup, although the author plans on it. What's NOT Supported? Not all of BuddyList's sources are included in this plugin, (it is primarily made for the Buddies application.) The buddies.buddylist.buddylistprovider.xml file is not supported for backups. What version of BuddyList does it currently support? Version 1.0.0 of the BlistProvider plugin is the only version that currently supports BuddyList. What kind of Blist file does this plugin support? The plugin supports the BlistFile XML format generated by the BuddyList application. The plugin will create a backup file in the default backup folder, and a new blist.xml file in the same folder

Supported Versions of BuddyList: This plugin was written for version 1.1.0 (september 2003)

Frequently asked questions (FAQ) on what this plugin does, etc... Why is there no way to restore text from the backup? Why not use SimpleBlistProvider or BlistNotify? For the time being, it is not possible. The author is aware of the future of BuddyList and it's intention to make it possible. As of now, he is happy to be living without the ability to restore text from backups. Can I use this plugin with versions of BuddyList
