Biodegradation of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCB) in biofilm was studied in the laboratory. Tests showed that PCB could be degraded in biofilm under certain conditions, and the high concentration of microbial in biofilm made their biodegradation faster. High concentrations of organic matter, Cu(2+) and Zn(2+) were necessary to accelerate their biodegradation. However, the COD/N ratio was not very important. The results of variance analysis showed that in the copper adsorption system, the factors that affected the removal rate of PCB were
