The friend told him, "There is a guy living in a utility closet in Scranton who really appreciates your music." David told his friend, "Call him and tell him my stuff is in the closet in the attic." The listener was a single mom who had seen her son grow up. David felt a close kinship and gave the gift of "I Can't Stop Loving You" to her. He felt like he had been given the opportunity to help that son do something with his life. And a little over 20 years ago, David returned to the Steel City, played a show for several hundred people, and the woman was waiting. She gave him a hug and made sure he was okay before she introduced herself to him. The whole thing was magic. From there the relationship grew and grew, and was established with the band's "Dreaming of a Dream" tour in 2014. Speaking about the relationship he has built with his fans, David said, "I want to be one of the people who says, 'I can 82138339de
