A gangster movie seen through the eyes of a cop, Once Upon a Time in Mumbai traces changes. I don't know what's wrong with Indian cinema, but it's getting less interesting and more and more disgusting. And if in the first films it was possible to observe how the hero or heroine did something for himself, now everyone began to think only about how to save their own skin. There is not much sense from these actions. Morality suffers from this. The picture has everything: love, and family troubles, and chases, and shootouts, and fights, and humor, and drama, and detective, and crime, and humor.
