You are here The comic book multiverse can be a pretty big place, but it turns out it's a lot more crowded than originally thought. Sixty feet wide, stretching across four planets and measuring from the three to the eye of a mountain, with hundreds of entities in it, and some of them walking around wearing clothes. The fivesome arrive by spaceship or teleport themselves through a shimmering portal that shrinks when it's not properly attuned. They even have a name for it: Frowning Tempus. Neon Peaks is a team of explosive superhero operatives working for the organization The Solver. The Solver is a top-secret agency whose official purpose is to defeat supervillains worldwide. However, as the president himself puts it, "the world doesn't need another way to commit mass murder." And though they operate outside the law, the members of the Neon Peaks team use their talents for good, making sure that the world stays well-stocked with super-powered products. In their own words, the team excels at "trying to get people out of the situation they find themselves in". Diverse adventures abound in the super-hero universe. This volume contains 24 tales of adventure, such as the ongoing string of thrilling adventures by Greg Capullo and Frank Quitely, the current Batman, as well as many short adventures you will not have seen anywhere else. Between those 24 tales and 11 graphic novels, there's plenty to experience: a high-tech mech suit, a psychological study of vigilantism, an evil cyborg, and more. Hi everyone! We've had a bit of a change of pace with this comic. Normally my next release is several days ahead of the rest of the gang's stuff, but in order to fit in as many conventions as possible for this summer, I'm able to release slower, one comic at a time. The Gang's all about their favorite things this month, as usual, but you might notice that there isn't a Jingle Bells on the cover. That's because I don't think I have a single copy of it in stock. So, if you're looking for a copy, I'd recommend ordering a digital copy (Preferably from Comixology) and waiting as long as it takes to get one delivered, as they tend to run out pretty quickly. In the meantime, if

Q: time to calculate ODE by multistep methods I try to solve the simple ODE $\frac{d^2x}{dt^2} + 2\frac{dx}{dt} + x = 0$ using the following method: Choose the h-step size $\Delta x_j = \frac{\Delta t_j}{2} x_{j-1}$ Consider the ODE in a fixed interval $t \in (t_{j-1}, t_j)$

$$\begin{aligned} \frac{dx}{dt}(t_j) &= \frac{dx}{dt}(t_{j-1}) - \frac{\Delta t_j}{\Delta x_j} \frac{d^2x}{dt^2}(t_{j-1}) \\ \frac{d^2x}{dt^2}(t_j) &= \frac{d^2x}{dt^2}(t_{j-1}) + \frac{2 \Delta t_j}{\Delta x_j} \frac{dx}{dt}(t_{j-1}) \end{aligned}$$

I apply my method to solve this equation with a simple initial condition $x(0)=0, x(1)=1$. The step size I choose is $h = 0.1$. So, I have to solve the following equation: $\frac{d^2x}{dt^2} + 2\frac{dx}{dt} + x = 0$ The solution can be expressed as the solution of a second order linear ODE as follows: $x(t) = \cos(t) \cos(t) + \cos^2(t)$ Therefore, the graph of $x(t)$ is which shows that my solution is correct. Now, I want to understand the "time" and "iterations" of the method (the number of step between the given boundary conditions). A: First of all, you can't solve the original ODE as it's a third-order one. To do it numerically we can rewrite it as \ddot{x}
