Shouldn't it be "Google" instead of "G-phone"?

----- mleonhard Yes, it is very exciting. ----- edblarney I wonder how expensive this is. Is it the same as the iPhone, in which case it's likely 'cheap'? ~~~ krick My guess is that it's going to be around 3k dollars. It's not much to pay for the price/performance ratio.

---

~~~ tedmiston But expensive enough to create a market. ----- exabrial Citrix is the only game in town for corporate secure desktop apps, apps that not only allow remote access, but

have a desktop style UX.
What makes this thing special? ~~~

philipkglass What makes Citrix special is that the workstation user can be replaced by the PC/tablet of the corporate IT department. What makes this thing special is that it doesn't have to be replaced. I'm not sure I'd call it "special" but it's certainly the first

interesting appliance-style tablet to hit the mainstream since the iPad. ~ ~ ~ exabrial But... Apple's the only one shipping it pre-installed. That's the point of Citrix. ----- nateberkopec It's not a Google phone, but it's definitely an Android phone. Not sure if they'll do anything with it. Probably not since it's running Android and there's basically no way to get that on something other than Google's Pixel line. ~~~ stagger87 It's definitely an Android phone. The specs page and the sample video make that clear. I don't think they'll do anything with it. ~~~ kspaans The sample video has the "Google Home" and the "Speaker" apps ~~~ exabrial "Samsung is really taking its marketing to a new level today." ~ ~ ~ kspaans

---

That's very funny.
Samsung is shipping a Google Home & Video device. ----- ttul
