Q: Linking to a previous Question - Database Design For A Review System I have to design a homework review database for one of my assignments. I understand how to create a database, but I'm completely lost with the review process I need to create. Here's the intended set up:

User	User Email	User First Name	User Last Name	HW's HWID	Subject	Question Text	Answer Text	User ID	Date	User Reviews	Review 1	Review 2	Review 3	... Review 20	Question Totals
Question #1	Reviewed	Question #2	Reviewed	Question #3	Reviewed	...	Question #20	Reviewed	So it goes through each HW and their respective Users and build a database of reviews given to that particular HW with the given user. And, of course, at the end of the review, the student is given the option to review their work and optionally pass, fail, skip, etc. It's been suggested that I write a query to loop through the 20 Question TOTALS and link their row to the ones that related to the particular HW and User, but I feel like there has to be a better way. I was thinking something along the lines of <code>select * from HWs w join user u on w.userid = u.userid where w.hwid = x and u.id = x</code> But this would only account for the related User, and not the total HW with that User. I'm not quite sure where to go with this and I'd love some clarification to my wrong thinking. A: Ah, no. That's the data. You have one User for each question. Users User Email User First Name User Last Name HW's HWID Subject Question Text Answer Text User ID
