Q: Can the PDE be written as a product of two eigenfunctions of the Laplace operator? My book says the following. If  $f$  solves the Laplace equation  $\Delta^2 f = 0$ , then  $g(x) = f(x^2)$  solves the hyperbolic PDE  $x \cdot \text{grad} g = 0$ . (In other words,  $g$  solves the wave equation  $\partial_{tt} g = 0$ .) I am not sure about why the statement is true. Could someone help me? A: If  $f$  solves  $\Delta f = 0$ , then  $f(x^2) = f(x^3) = f(x^4) = \dots$ . It follows that  $f$  is a linear combination of the functions  $x^n$  with  $n \in \mathbb{N}$ . The functions  $x^n$  satisfy  $\partial_t(x^n) = n x^{n-1}$  and  $x \cdot \text{grad}(x^n) = n x^{n-1}$ . This shows that  $g(x) := f(x^2) = f(x^4) = \dots$  solves the wave equation  $\partial_{tt} g = 0$ .

Monitoring the acute effects of natural products on human red blood cells using a flow cytometry-based automated data analysis. Combined research and clinical trials on natural products are needed to assess their potential use as a preventive therapy against infectious diseases. Here, an automated method was developed to analyze the acute effects of natural products on erythrocytes by measuring the geometry of the erythrocytes, using flow cytometry. Our data show that oroxylin-A (10  $\mu\text{M}$ ) acutely increases the average size of the red blood cells and deformability of erythrocytes. Following treatment with oroxylin-A, the yield of the hemolysis of the erythrocytes was significantly decreased.

Structure of the anti-invasive compound, Ukrain. In our present study, Ukrain, a novel, natural anti-cancer agent which was previously found to be effective against mammary tumors, was examined with high-resolution  $^1\text{H}$  NMR, revealing that Ukrain binds to DNA and RNA.
