1) Characters and Battle System

The Elden Ring uses a double-blind system that allows you to freely combine weapons, armor, and magic. By filling the opponent's "shoulder," "chest," and "head" panels (white squares) with the weapon for which your character is trained, armor for which your character is equipped, and magic for which your character is skilled, the Battle Adjustment Cards will calculate the accuracy of your attack, the evasion rate of your defense, etc., and offer you a suitable combination of weapon, armor, and magic. However, the fighting position of your character is also important. If you wish to use your character from a false start state, fill the panels as appropriate for your character and select the No Strength Combo. This will automatically increase or decrease the strength of your attacks based on your stats. While the shoulder and chest have binary systems, head is based on experience points: when the experience rating of the respective character is filled, if the number is higher than the corresponding white square and comes before or matches the strength of the attack, your attack will reflect with a +20% "Upper Body" and a +20% "Lower Body" for the strength of the attack or B.A.C., which negates the effect of experience. The higher the skill level of the character in using melee weapons, the better the attack accuracy. The higher the character's Defense Skill, the better the defense. The higher the character's Defense Skill, the better the accuracy of "blocked" "reflective" attacks such as Thorn Shield and Elder Sword.

(edited to simplify) The Reddit page has a bit more info, and at that page it also mentions that there might be some sort of companion app. 6.5/10 reviews on the app store say it's not quite worth it. 1) how do you start the game? 2) how can you connect with other players? 3) does it play multiplayer? (both online and local) I remember having some issues with it, because I couldn't connect to wifi due to the complete lack of local area wireless networks and this game's lack of one at all. I tried it last year and it didn't work for me either, and by the time I realized that I couldn't, the servers were shut down. Revelations: Hopefully this won't be the case for you. The game is the perfect example of being a good idea that was poorly executed. The idea behind the game is good, the story is good, the characters are good, the combat is good, the weapons are good, the difficulty ramps up well, and the drop rate of certain items is very high. Even though I bought this as a gift to my girlfriend, I kept playing it and bringing her with me every time I played and she had all these questions about the game and I told her I'd write her a review so she could have the answers. She liked it overall and seemed to really like the Elden Ring part of it, but had some issues with the character progression system in the main game. That's a pretty big caveat in the review, since it's supposed to be a game you can play solo. I honestly felt like it could have been a great game if it had just been properly executed. It has the potential to be a good action role playing game, but because the developers botched the main parts of the game, it's just left with a good idea that's turned into a good idea with a bad execution. The good: The fast combat with the ability to block and dodge is a nice change of pace from the typical turn based RPGs. This makes you feel like a badass that doesn't take time to analyze every move and counter because you're so good at reacting to your opponent's every move. The combat can be intense and there are awesome animation and visual effects that help the combat feel like it's the best thing

How to reduce the time complexity for this algorithm? I came up with the following algorithm which runs in  $O(n^2)$  time complexity. The algorithm works fine, but I am stuck at  $n^2$ . I looked at the algorithm, and came to the conclusion that the outer for loop (first loop) runs through every block of  $n^2$  elements. Is there any way I can invert this and make time complexity  $O(n)$ ? Also, as suggested in the comments, "Range" should have no duplicate values.

int[] algorithm(int[] A){ if(A==null || A.length == 0) return null; Range B = new Range(A); //gets all the the elements of A for(int i =0 ;i < B.length() ;i++){ for(int k=0 ; k < B.length() ; k++)
