Elden Ring Features Key:

Dungeon Exploration: The vastness of the Lands Between is explored dungeon by dungeon.

Conflict : Choose your initial position, follow the action, and bring about conflicts between Elden Lords.

A Rich RPG Experience : Take your party of up to four heroes on an epic journey.

Various Arenas of Combat : From the large dungeons with a variety of traps to open field battles, you can battle in numerous places and play in intense two-on-two fights.

Dynamic Characters : Myriad choices in typical RPG fashion leading to actions of your own volition.

Customizable Characters : Create your own personal character who will take on an Elden Lord's role.

Endless Dungeon Exploration: All entrances to the dungeon can be reset.

A Chance to Revive: At the end of battle, your heroes can rise from the dead to continue the adventure. From then on, the world will persist based on your actions.

Ceremonies: You and your allies can call upon another person's memories of the Lands Between to revive an area of the world where great power is sealed away.

Atmosphere : The Lands Between is set in a world that still reminds you of our own, and the dialogue you will encounter from the NPCs, and the the people you meet during your adventure reflect that setting.

Weak-hearted heroes can emerge safely in the Lands Between while valiant heroes will be consumed by supernatural evil forever.

This post was edited by Sera_the_Toxic (2014-07-31 04:24:05)The present invention relates to an in-process wireless telephone or pager handhold, and more particularly, to an in-process wireless telephone or pager handhold which simulates the appearance of an in-use or "turned on" telephone or pager. Wireless telephone or pager handholds are known. Examples of such handholds include the Philips Signa 207.RTM. pager.RTM., which is a pager with a headset, manufactured by Philips Electronics North America Corp., 3075 North Loop W., Santa Clara, Calif. 95051-1552. In-process wireless telephone or pager handholds are also known. These handholds are generally used in a laboratory or testing environment to test telephone equipment without incurring the higher costs associated with "in-use" equipment. Examples of in-process wireless telephone or pager handholds include those shown in U.S. Pat. No. 4,965,730, issued Oct. 30, 1990, U.S. Pat. No. 4,977,727, issued Dec. 11, 1990, U.S. Pat. No. 5,105,158, issued Apr. 14, 1992 and U.S. Pat. No. 5,193,054, issued Mar. 16, 1993. In-process or test wireless telephone or pager handholds have other drawbacks. For example, an in-process wireless telephone or pager handhold simulates an in-use or "turned on" telephone or pager, but does not provide the typical "on" or "off" dial tone or ringer sounds associated with that telephone or pager. Also, an in-process wireless telephone or pager handhold allows a person to use the in-process telephone or pager handhold without the need to have a separate telephone or pager handset. In some testing situations, however, dial tone or ringers must be available for telephone or pager testing. Also, the person performing the telephone or pager testing must have or carry an additional handset for his or her telephone or pager. In-use or "on" hand-held wireless telephone or pager handsets are also known. The handsets are used in an "on" condition to communicate with a party at a telephone or pager system bff6bb2d33
