1. Field of the Invention The invention is in the field of optics and lasers. More particularly, the invention is in the field of highly efficient, high output solid state lasers and a method for fabricating such laser devices. 2. Description of the Prior Art The use of lasers in modern industry has increased rapidly in recent years. Many thousands of laser products have been introduced into the marketplace and many new applications are being developed constantly. This has led to a tremendous amount of technical development in the last several years. Though a great many different technologies have been developed, the basic operating principles of lasers are essentially the same. A laser is a highly coherent, coherent, light source that must be energized by a pumping light source. The energy (electrons) of the pumping light source are used to excite electrons in a lasing medium, such as an optical gain medium that possesses gain. The excited electrons in turn release photons having a frequency slightly above the frequency of the pumping light. The release of photons from the gain medium produces coherent light that may be directed in a controlled manner for various purposes. These purposes include destroying or preventing the propagation of biological and non-biological materials, such as enemy aircraft and bacteria, as well as their detection, measurement, and/or destroying. For example, infrared lasers that are capable of generating between 1.5 and 60 watts of coherent power have been deployed for the destruction of biological and non-biological materials. Lasers are used by soldiers in mines and various kinds of defensive weapons. They are used for processing, measuring and other purposes in many industries. Of the many types of lasers that are manufactured, the most commonly used lasers are manufactured according to the so-called "diode-pumped" design. The laser diode is one of the most efficient and cost-effective laser diodes available. Generally speaking, in laser diodes, a contact is made to a semiconductor with a highly rectifying characteristic (i.e., diode characteristic) so that the device will only conduct electric current in the forward direction. Moreover, the contacts to the laser device are maintained at a positive voltage with respect to a metal layer disposed on the laser device. The metal layer serves to block the flow of the current through the laser device under reverse bias conditions. When the laser diode is energized, the contacts on the device are forward biased and the metal layer serves to block the current from flowing. The primary weakness of laser diodes is their low

The U.S. House of Representatives is at a standoff with House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi. Pelosi told her conference in a closed-door meeting this morning that she's not prepared to accept a leadership position from Speaker John Boehner if he takes control of the chamber, according to a source present in the meeting. Rep. John Larson, D-Conn., who took over the gavel this week after Pelosi's longtime protege, Rep. Xavier Becerra, D-Calif., had to relinquish the position, confirmed to Business Insider that Pelosi expressed her intention to stay put as speaker if Boehner takes the gavel. Pelosi's announcement came the day before Boehner's toadie at the Heritage Foundation, Rep. John Boehner of Ohio, wrote a column for Fox News in which he touted himself as the heir apparent to keep the Republican Party together. News of Pelosi's staunch defense of her position came a day after Boehner's ascension to the speaker's post was confirmed by the full Republican Conference. After the meeting, Larson told reporters he disagreed with Pelosi's assertion that she could not accept Boehner's offer. "I think she is on the wrong path," Larson said. "She is turning her back on Democratic values." Larson said Pelosi discussed her decision not to accept Boehner's offer to become House minority leader with Democratic colleagues before Congress recessed for a two-week vacation. He said she told colleagues she might accept Boehner's offer, but on Friday would not, Larson said. "This is big news and this is a big moment," Larson said. Larson said he believes Pelosi is sticking to her stance to remain speaker, but may accept a position in the minority or step down if that is what the full Democratic Conference decides. "She has not really specified what she will or will not do," he said. "I think she has done a pretty good job of taking the temperature on the Democratic Conference." Larson said that if Pelosi stepped down, it could change the Democratic Conference's feelings about running in the future. "I think she has earned a certain goodwill amongst her colleagues. If she vacates that spot, there is a chance that some of us won't run again," he said. Larson said he believed an internal Democratic power struggle, in which Pelosi plays a major role, will help him win re-election in 2014. Larson is considering running for re-
