You are in control of a spacefaring civilization. Your universe is known as the Artanis Alliance, and it struggles to repel invasions from the warlike Vanduul and from predatory aliens like the Drepin. You are, in fact, the leader of this Alliance. You are Commander Tionisla Artanis, and you're ready to lead your home into greatness. You will need to lead your people to victory against enemies and crises, for your star is falling into darkness. Your resources have been decimated by the Drepin, and your spacefleet is depleted by the wars you are fighting. Space is vast and unforgiving. Remember, this is a video game – you can't push or shoot people.

There is no refunds. How do I get started? Game Overview The year is 2227 and you have been selected to serve as Commander of the Artanis Alliance. Command your starfaring civilization and defend it from numerous threats, including giant conqueror aliens. Commanders and enemies alike must navigate the perilous Uncharted Worlds, a multitude of systems filled with densely populated human colonies, while simultaneously participating in multiple military operations.

Commanders must lead their people to victory against enemies and crises, for this is a video game - you can't push or shoot people. There is no refunds. Your science team has begun collecting data on the Drepin, a mysterious alien race that has plagued the Artanis Alliance for years. In response, they have activated the Drepin-Specific Crisis Protocol, which is designed to destroy all Drepin with the help of a doomsday-style weapon that they developed. Because the Drepin are familiar with this weapon, it is safe to say that the Artanis Alliance will not simply let the Drepin become extinct. You have been tasked with devising a plan to eliminate the Drepin from the Universe, and you have been given a small group of elite, high-value targets. Where do I find Artanis? Artanis is located on the top floor of the Coronado Science Station. What happens if I die? If you die at any time, the game ends, and the mission is over. You will not lose any money, experience points, or privileges. If you die a

Dramativ International Network, Inc. grants to Class Member, Kandice Taylor, a one-year, no-cost membership to HSG membership. Speech Reproducible German Basics, Essence, Evolution Saturday, 25 February 2015 So, one of my goals for 2015 was to try and start using html tags - or at least preface things with them. The idea is you don't necessarily have to use every single tag, so long as you use tags for the parts of the paragraph that you want to add emphasis and use lots of blank space for bulk text. There are various tools on the internet to help you with this - I use wordle which you can read about here. That tool was really helpful in showing me that there was more emphasis being given to the text in the photo that needed to be boxed up more. On Friday, my 11th hour, (insert an excuse here) became a 24 hour day. For some reason, I had the idea of putting together a few graphics with Google Draw and being able to alter the text and loop and add different fonts. As you can imagine, it didn't take that long to get to this point This slideshow requires JavaScript. The last one has what I think is an interesting visual, as the symbols you could insert change the text for you. This slideshow requires JavaScript. It looks like I'm not the only one to be curious about this - there's a request submitted to draw something like this - with the goal of undoing all this work when a copy is used. Well, here's the problem with me. I'm not sure if the effect was actually made this way. My thought is that if you were to copy the form each time, it would create a loop. As my friend, Captain Dementor said - A bird in the hand is better than two in the bush. Anyhoo, this will probably be of interest to my American friends. And I'll have a copy if anyone is interested. I mean, it's free - what more do you want? There's lots of speculation about companies being bought out by their larger competitors. Reports from MasterPost indicate that Sprint has been contemplating a buy out of T-Mobile as they sit at 3% and AT&T at 13%. However, MasterPost also says that the FCC has taken up a study that

An operation designed to reduce the size of the German Kharkov operational-strategic reserves. The goal of the offensive was to reduce the size of German Kharkov reserves. In turn, the main blow was directed against Kharkov. On the left flank the divisions of the 3rd Romanian Corps and the 43rd Romanian Infantry Corps would attack in the Kharkov salient (Berezina mountains) to the east of the city. South of Kharkov was the 51st Romanian Corps, which would attack in the Shklo area and possibly reach the area of Kharkov from the north. The 5th Romanian Corps had its main attack in the Krasnobavarsky district of Kharkov, cutting off the breakout routes from the city, as well as the bridgehead of the 52nd Romanian Corps along the Uda from Sokol region to Shpakovka. The regrouped troops of this area would have to reach the city, thus reinforcing the main blow. Any German units left behind would be destroyed by tanks and the artillery of the corps. The main blow would be directed towards the south from the southwest, and towards the east from the southeast. The exact route is to be chosen as there were a number of possible routes, as well as several small roads, which would make the task of tank units difficult. The course of the main blow was chosen based on the data obtained in the reconnoiter. The plan for the offensive (August 22, 1943) was a repeated offensive action conducted by 10 divisions (4 infantry divisions and 6 gds), The plan was based on a concentric movement, where the divisions from the east and the south would first cross the Soviet rear, then attack the enemy forward of the main forces. The attack was to be directed at the enemy in his positions in the general area of Kharkov. In addition to the main blow, the detachments of some units would also attack, primarily to destroy the enemy forward detachments, such as the enemy during the approach to the city, destroy bridges and railroad crossing over the Berezina River. The operation was designed to eliminate the entire enemy group (regardless of the final destination). Player Experience: Performing the plan of the operation and winning it will be extremely difficult for the player, because the German forces in the operation area are very dispersed. They are divided between units of various units, the majority of which are dispersed behind the defense of the main force of the Axis.
