[Recording the Beatles] The Beatles - My Life (The Official Story).Q: Carriers and authentication with client certificates (Google, Facebook, etc.) I'm working on a new project where I am required to use a client certificate to authenticate to our server. The server will be receiving those certificates from other trusted sources. From what I understand, there are two main authentication methods (with client certificates): Single Sign On: Users will be only authenticated once when they log in to the application with the client certificate. Multi-Step: User will have to authenticate to the server with their certificate, and then be provided with a code (a token?) that can be used to log in again. The application will be using the Basic Auth mechanism to authenticate users. So, my question is, does this mean I cannot use single sign on with this client certificate? Or is it possible to create a user that is authenticated to the server only when that user logs in with the client certificate? To reiterate, I'm asking if it's possible to use client certificates with SSO. My understanding is that it's not an option, but I couldn't find any definitive answer on the issue. Thanks in advance Edit: To clarify, I'm talking about logins, not authentications. A: You can use both, and both are possible. Single Sign On is perfectly possible with the aid of an active directory or a LDAP server. You just need a central sign-in server, which can then, depending on the SSO provider, act as a single sign-on agent. However, you can either connect directly to your AD/LDAP server (usually configured by you), or you can connect to some public SSO provider. You could also do Single Sign On with a PKI, but that's not the same as a AD/LDAP SSO provider. This article is more than 2 years old This article is
