Comments I decided to repost this here because it's just that well written. The author will probably get a notification that his thread is in a very, very old thread and will probably get posted on geekgirls, I just thought that the people who were looking for answers would find it. "What is your favorite Dragon? Mine is the Pegasoth. I have an awesome Dragon theme. I can't imagine life without him." I've had Drago since TSR1 I think and have had some stuff through e-bay and stuff. I have a lesser edition of the Dragon book, a cool snaggletooth, a smaller toothy fella and a couple of toothy puppies with feral expressions. I've captured thousands of Whiterun dragons as I've gone around the capital slaying them and I've opened up my own auction house to sell them off at prices determined by how much I killed them. I've made a little progress with this, but I've got only just over 50 dragons open, and the fastest I've gone to open more than one is at maybe 2 weeks? I've heard from people that it's easy to get the Whiterun dragons, but I guess I'll have to wait until I get a big enough collection to start unlocking them. :(I also opened up a classified section of the auction house where other people can post places where they can buy things, like dragons, equipment, NPCs, houses etc. I'm using a modified version of the written fantasy forum software available at It's pretty kludgy but it works for my purposes. Try to post as much as you can about your Dragons, and please post pictures of them, with appropriate keywords for easy searching. Role-Playing Game Heavy on the moral ambiguity, light on the explanation, RPGs are refreshingly free from the constant chatter of procedural generation. In a Role-Playing Game, it's up to you to decide what to do: should you stab your friends in the back, or take the high road? Should you bow down to the whims of a wicked king, or teach the vile bastard a lesson? What's that? You don't care? That's just fine. Wouldn't you like to add some story elements to your game, making you and your friends happy, even as you mercilessly devour your own with your acid-spitting sword? Thank you for asking. Some say you're the best role-playing game around. Just watch out - the Dungeon Master might think otherwise. It's been a long time coming... The world has been beset by dragons for ages. Their depredations have led to the destruction of most of the lands once inhabited by civilized people, and now it seems the monsters that destroyed civilization have returned in even worse numbers.
