For Tutorials please visit the official tooltips tutorial at developers.microsoft.com! Supported Languages: - english - dutch Limitations: - you cannot edit the tooltip text directly but have to edit the code, delete the tooltip text and save the code. - tooltips are cached. When you change a control's ID, the tooltips are not regenerated. You will see this when you change the ID because the tooltip is changed but the tooltips are not regenerated. This will be fixed when the next version is released. - the input/text fields are only one line wide. You can change this by editing the input/text control type (the wsh interface). This is not currently done. - if you have images in your tooltips you can not use the mouseover property or use it with image effects. This is not a problem because we don't generate the mouseover properties and the image effects. What's New In Tooltip Code Generator?

Tooltip Code Generator is a application that was designed to be a handy code generating program. Q: JOOQ: Constructing a many-to-many join table with pre-existing data I have the following tables in my database: CREATE TABLE event (id BIGINT PRIMARY KEY, name TEXT NOT NULL); CREATE TABLE tag (id BIGINT PRIMARY KEY, name TEXT NOT NULL); CREATE TABLE event_tag (event_id BIGINT NOT NULL, tag_id BIGINT NOT NULL, PRIMARY KEY(event_id,tag_id)); The event_tag table is complete, it contains examples of various events that have been tagged with one or more tags. I want to populate this table using JOOQ, and I'm stuck on how to do it properly. The intended SQL query is simple: SELECT event_id, tag_id FROM event_tag WHERE event_id = 123; JOOQ generates the following for the view: CREATE OR REPLACE VIEW "public"."event_tag" ("event_id", "tag_id") AS SELECT "event_id", "tag_id" FROM "my_database"."event_tag" WHERE "event_id" = 123; Of course, in the above example I'm using my_database as a placeholder for the correct database name. I'm not sure where "my_database" comes from, but that's a separate question. This is where I'm stuck: I want JOOQ to generate something like INSERT INTO "event_tag" ("event_id", "tag_id") VALUES (123, 1); INSERT INTO "event_tag" ("event_id", "tag_id") VALUES (123, 2); ... but for many rows. Note that this is not a "many-to-one" situation like the answer to this question. There's
