A novel retinoic acid responsive gene, Eg-RA-9, is expressed specifically in the retina during Xenopus laevis oogenesis. We have cloned a cDNA for a novel Xenopus laevis retinoic acid (RA) responsive gene, Eg-RA-9, using the differential display method. Northern blot analysis revealed that the expression level of this gene increased during Xenopus oocyte maturation. Eg-RA-9 mRNA was detected in the whole retina by in situ hybridization, and this is the first demonstration of the expression of a RA responsive gene in the whole retina. In addition, its inducibility with retinoic acid demonstrated that Eg-RA-9 is likely to be a molecular marker for retinal differentiation, irrespective of sex. 1.
