Open University of Catalonia Open University of Catalonia (, OUC) is a public non-profit university created in 1989, that is funded by the Catalan Government in Catalonia, Spain. It has campuses in Barcelona and Sant Cugat del Vallès. It offers BA and BS degrees in the main areas of study, and also provides post-graduate studies in the Bologna Process. History In 1989 the then Minister of Education José Manuel Carratalá established the Plan of University Universities of Catalonia (PUC), a state program to promote and integrate universities and post-graduate institutions. One of the main requirements of the PUC was to create a university system that met the needs of the Catalan society. After drafting the project, three different institutions were created, the Open University of Catalonia (OUC) (Não era mais facil), the Open University of Catalonia Center (UOC) (Centro Universitària OUC) (As Universidades Opens no Merit) (Centre universitaire OUC), and the Institute for Humanities and Sciences (Institut d'Estudis per a la Ciència i la Cultura Humanística). The whole program was approved by the Board of Governors of all the Universities in Catalonia (2005). In November 1989, the first campus was inaugurated in Sant Cugat del Vallès, with 4 majors in the first year of activities: Education, Industry and Communication Sciences, Engineering and Architecture, and Human Resources. In 1998, the Open University of Catalonia changed its name to its current name. Should the Democrats proceed to nominate Hillary Clinton in December or should they nominate Barack Obama in August? My view is that either will be too late. I think it's important to have an unstoppable juggernaut on the Democrats side and the more the Democrats nominate their front-runner, the less energy there 0cc13bf012
