Elden Ring [March-2022]

(direct quote) I only had a mediocre impression at first but then I got my hands on it. And I discovered something I had never known before- that I actually enjoyed this game. I finally understand what it means to have a character that can directly connect with the audience. Honestly speaking, I felt a bit upset that the story ended in such a way... I'm not a fan of some of the scenarios of the story either, but it really was a revolutionary game... I only had a mediocre impression at first but then I got my hands on it. Honestly speaking, I felt a bit upset that the story ended in such a way... I'm not a fan of some of the scenarios of the story either, but it really was a revolutionary game... This was why I bought the game on day 1 from the random guy I met at the local game store. The story didn't drag on. (I can't remember if there was a voice actor or not for one of the main characters.) The plot wasn't unrealistic. It was refreshing to see the kind of story I usually only see in anime. It was about ordinary people who happened to have a supernatural power. The main character wasn't the superman archetype. The story gave you a chance to know him. The main character didn't have the epiphany moment at the end. He didn't get his happy ending. He was just perfectly human. And he had to learn to earn that happy ending. There were a lot of twists and the game didn't let you down as a result of that. I haven't finished the game yet but I've already seen at least 20 unique endings. Each time the story changes and you get something totally different. There were a lot of twists and the game didn't let you down as a result of that. I'm not a technical person so my impressions might be a bit biased, but that's how I felt. I would like to go into the details of game's mechanics later but right now I'll say this- I was definitely not bored. I wanted to go on. bff6bb2d33
