**Color and Levels

Adjustment** Most

photographers use the Levels tool to adjust the colors in an image. It's a great way to adjust brightness, contrast, and color saturation (see Figure 12-7).

**NOTE** You will have to adjust colors, contrast, saturation, and brightness in a defined range. Before you can make adjustments, you must make sure that only the colors in that range are selected. The rest of the image will be blacked out, while the colors you are attempting to adjust remain. For example, if you want to change the colors in just the sky, but not the color in the other elements, you must make sure that only the color you want to change is selected. In this example, you would only select the sky.
