chronic transection injury to the mid-thoracic spinal cord were sacrificed after 4 and 7 months and their spinal cords analyzed by immunocytochemistry for protein gene product 9.5 (PGP9.5), the protein products of the Thy-1 gene, myelin basic protein and the neurofilaments. The data showed that neurons in the injured segment survive and grow in the white matter. They express the protein products of the Thy-1 gene. This is the first study to characterize neuronal growth in the spinal cord of a mammalian species with a chronic injury.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an endoscope provided with a capsule for
