New Now In This Section "Rape is an act of violence. It is certainly an act of power. No one can become a victim of a crime that is committed with force and power. Violence is power, not in isolation but in its vast integration. In a world that values power, violence becomes power." Deeply rooted in the politics of victimization, violence has become the great public shame. As the crime of the Nation, it is a political crime with, so to speak, a right to voice. But how does a woman define her victimhood, or any human being, exactly? In the Title III of the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA, 90-1193, 1992), victim issues are discussed in the Committee on the Judiciary on Violence Against Women. But what issues are there? What is the definition of victim? The Violence Against Women Act was drafted with the assumption of one special kind of victim: women. Some women are also defined as victims because of their political role, because of their race, religion or color. However, there are no provisions of the Violence Against Women Act which define rape victims as persons who have been raped, and no provision to give them rights or benefits. This is obviously problematic. VAWA was drafted for the purpose of providing remedies for those women who were victims of violence. The definition of victim is based on the first victim of violence. And this first victim (a woman) is defined as a woman who has suffered physical or sexual violence. These victims are identified as victims of "gender-based" violence. VAWA, however, does not apply to non-gender violence. Some people are raped by people of their own gender. Some people are victimized by people of both sexes. Rape is not only gender violence. Some men are also victims of violence. It is also clear that rape is not just violence against the woman, but a kind of sexual violation against the woman, a rape of the woman's body, a violation of her sexuality. Rape is rape of both body and soul. Rape is, therefore, not only a crime against a person, but also against a person's whole nature, and it is thus a crime against the human community. Rape, furthermore, is a crime against those women who do not want to be raped, since it brings a deformation, a disfigurement of the human being and distorts his or her social value. The number of women who are intimidated and raped is vast; but they lack the right

A South Florida man suffering from an autoimmune disorder was put in a medically induced coma for three days after a sheriff's deputy shot him in the head during a traffic stop last month, an incident that was caught on video. Bernardo Isaac, 28, fell in front of his car after being pulled over around 2:20 a.m. on April 30 by an officer from the Broward Sheriff's Office in Miramar, according to a police report released Thursday. When he continued to walk toward the vehicle, Deputy Justin Coss of the BBDO reserve unit at the BSO fired one shot, hitting Isaac in the left side of the head, according to the report. The cop then fired another shot, but the report said that shot went into the air above Isaac's head. 'SILENT SURGE' OF WEAPONS CHARGES RISE IN BROWARD COUNTY Coss was not injured in the incident. Police said in the report that Isaac had been drinking and was driving "at a high rate of speed" when he was pulled over. "The posted speed limit was 60 mph. When the officer activated the blue lights, the vehicle began to slow down, but the vehicle accelerated," the report said. "The vehicle then did a u-turn." Isaac lost control of the vehicle when "he continued to drive at a high rate of speed through the curve," according to the report. His vehicle then struck a tree. WOMAN WAKES UP AFTER SUCCUMBING TO SLEEPWALKING TERRORISM, POLICE SAY Isaac was transported to the hospital and eventually put on life support, according to the report. A deputy told NBC 6 that Isaac's family had asked that he be put in a coma, the website reported. The incident has triggered an internal affairs investigation, according to police. "We don't want this to happen to anyone else," police spokesman Jeremy Ring said. "We don't want anyone to suffer this, and especially not to suffer it at the hands of a deputy that we trusted to protect and serve." The BBDO reserve unit posted a statement on Facebook: CLICK HERE TO GET THE FOX NEWS APP "The name of the deputy who pulled over and shot Bernardo may be exposed by the investigation, however it has been determined that this deputy is not facing any charges because of the investigation," the post
