Solar Redout Racing League, the fastest racing league ever created, landed on Mars! The complex is situated in the Arabia Terra continent and the Red Planet shines with its dusty deserts and weird rock formations. The low gravity (approximately 38% of Earth's) played a major role in experimenting verticality and driving on the exterior of the common racing tubes, bringing back a true classic of the arcade racing genre. Mars Pack adds: - The Mars Environment, with 5 shiny new tracks and a new challenging boss track; - Two new unlocked liveries for each team - that's 48 new unlocked liveries; - Twenty brand new career events. The Mars Pack is available for both single and multi-player games. Redout - Mars Pack for Xbox One (60% OFF) Limited time ONLY What the critics say: "It's the first Redout, and the first racer for the Xbox 360." VideoGamer.com "Redout: Mars 3 uses the style and feel of the previous games so well that it fits seamlessly into the world of Redout: Mars 2." GameSpot "Let's play Redout, in which you blast and drift your way through 17 new tracks in four different environments, and try to beat the high score with it." IGNOkay, well, here's the thing. Starting today, I'll be ready for guests whenever they show up at my house. For the next three months, I will do my best to answer the door and greet all of you lovely people who stop by and pay a visit to my humble abode, offer your support and leave cheery notes. I will be in my bed with a night light on and my eyes closed, my gift-wrapped package of Cinnamon Toast Crunch directly in front of me. I will be ready for you, my little fellow, and I am so sorry if I act a little put out with you in the beginning. I'm certain you'll be over it before you know it. That is, unless I go on and on and on about it, like I have with my mom and dad and sister and brother and goddamned cats. Oh, what's the use. I'm just going to say it: I'm having an anxiety attack, because I'm sure there are people who want to visit me for a short time, but don't like me and would be a pain in the butt. And I'm a bit timid, so

Like many Japanese role-playing video games, Otaku's Study (R)PGM VX Ace offers an integrated story and gameplay experience. This remake of Otaku's Study for RPG Maker VX Ace features many of the same features as the original version, but is otherwise completely new and original. It includes new quests, new character classes, and new pictures. Story: The storyline takes place when the protagonist, Hiro, is about to start his first year at college. Hiro has been playing the RPG software RPG Maker VX Ace, and he would like to be able to make his own game. However, he doesn't have the skills to do so, so he seeks out a tutor. However, he eventually meets new girl, Miyako. 1) Hiro and Miyako both sit down for the first time to discuss their game idea. Hiro struggles to think of an idea, and Miyako suggests that he should let his imagination be free. 2) Hiro starts making a game about a group of soccer players in a high school. Hiro takes no particular time with the game, as he barely has any artistic ability. 3) Miyako decides to show Hiro some of the neat stuff she can do with RPG Maker. She has some special talent with sprites, and she shows Hiro a few sprites that are created for their game. 4) Hiro's walkthrough of Miyako's creation is filled with errors, as Hiro can hardly even understand what Miyako is saying. The subtitle of this section is "Mystery of a girl solved." 5) Miyako continues to work on her project, and the video that she is putting together features Hiro's bad game art. Miyako shows Hiro a couple more examples of her techniques. 6) The final video ends with Miyako showing Hiro how to make and edit a sprite. Hiro then makes a sprite of a chicken, and the two pass each other on their walk to school. Gameplay: The story of the main gameplay involves Hiro creating a character and then developing that character over the course of several stages. Hiro starts out in creating a character that he likes, but his graphic design skills are awful. He is very worried, but he is determined to make a game anyway. At the final stage of the game, Hiro must create the game's "fanservice" content, which is how Hiro and Miyako eventually meet. Game Basics: Within this remake, c9d1549cdd

Melchizedek This column is the last one in my 2014 writing contest. I totally enjoyed sharing my pen name with you guys. I will be continuing to write this column, but I've decided to change the name to "Novelist John M. Chance" and continue reading it on novelistjohnmchance.com. I hope you can still catch all of the amazing writing from other talented people. In this month's show, I'm going to dive deep into a blog I stumbled upon that touched me so hard, I cried. It's about a young woman's struggles and she has an amazing feeling for words. I never had a teacher, my parents taught me, and I just want to encourage young writers to get out there and write even if what you are writing is rubbish. It does not matter because you'll get better at it. Here is my interview with young writers Fabiola, who transcribed her interview for me. The interview began: Fabiola: I'm Fabiola and I'm fifteen years old. I live in Michigan. I have a master's degree in English and I like to write a lot of different things but I'm mostly writing poetry. I feel like poetry is my favorite kind of writing, it feels like it makes sense to me, it kind of tells a story so it felt like it made sense to me to spend my life learning to write poetry and becoming a poet. Last but not least, I play competitive softball. Softball's the third thing I like to do. John: Fabiola sounds like a fun person, to be reading about something you like. I'd love to see your resume or your even your about page if you had one? Fabiola: I did update my About page, I changed it. In my bio, I have my resume and all my work in different places. John: Okay. If you had to describe yourself in one word, what word would you choose? Fabiola: Interesting. I would have to think for a little while and I'm not sure what I would come up with. I think I've answered this question probably so many times. John: Yeah, I don't know. I like if people described me in one word
