Password.rar.Laparoscopic sigmoid resection for diverticular disease: a retrospective analysis of results in a teaching hospital. Diverticular disease is the most common form of diverticular disease of the colon. The diagnosis is typically clinical and radiological. Treatment is surgical, but the best approach is controversial. Our aims were to assess the results of laparoscopic resection of the sigmoid colon for diverticular disease and to identify factors that may influence outcome. Eighteen consecutive patients underwent laparoscopic sigmoid resection for diverticular disease between February 1997 and October 1999. Operative, postoperative and long-term outcomes were assessed. Of the 18 patients, 13 had a good outcome, with five satisfactory and eight failures. Conversion to laparotomy was required in 11 patients (61%). Postoperative morbidity occurred in seven patients (38%), compared with no morbidity in nine patients (50%) undergoing the procedure after October 1999. No patient developed anastomotic dehiscence. Patients with poor bowel preparation and those who had an increased duration of disease had poorer postoperative results. Laparoscopic sigmoid resection for diverticular disease is a safe and effective procedure with low morbidity.Q: SharePoint 2013 JSLink - SharePoint 2013 DocumentLink What is the difference between "@currentField.DocumentLink" and "@currentField.Url"? Let's say I have the following code for creating a TextField in the SharePoint Page $(document).ready(function () { //@currentField is the Client OM object. var fieldDef = 'Name'; var field = { __metadata: { 'type': 'SP.Field' }, FieldInternalName: 'Name', View: 'Page', Title: 'Title', __FieldData

All treatments were designed to approximate the usual diets of the U.S. population, excluding, however, trans fats and artificially high-fructose corn syrup. The high-fat diet is recommended to control weight gain in most people and to prevent cardiovascular disease. The low-fat diet is recommended to lower the risk of cardiovascular disease and several types of cancer. The high-fiber, low-fat diet, which favors high-fiber products and low-fat products, is recommended to treat diabetes, enhance weight loss, and lower the risk of cardiovascular disease. The high-fiber, low-fat diet was the most effective diet for reducing body weight, body mass index, total cholesterol, low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol, and blood pressure. The low-fat diet was the most effective diet for reducing triglycerides. The high-fiber diet was more effective for reducing body weight than the low-fat diet, but was less effective for lowering LDL cholesterol. The low-fat diet produced favorable changes in blood glucose and lipid concentrations and markers of insulin resistance, compared with the high-fiber and control diets. These results support the effectiveness of low-fat, high-fiber diets for primary and secondary prevention of cardiovascular disease. 6d1f23a050
