In many cases, I tend to wrap a fixed data structure inside a class, which usually is then put into a std:map of some sort. A typical "wrapping class" might look like this: template struct Wrapper { static const int NUM_TEMPLATE_ARGUMENTS; This is nice, because it allows me to write: #include #include "wrapper.h" int main() { Wrapper *my_string = new Wrapper{"hello there"}; std::map> map = { { "string_a", Wrapper{"string_b"}, { "string_b", Wrapper{"string_c"}}, Wrapper{"string_c"}},

A: The Web Connection is timed out Changing the connection of the file to a 1.5Mbps (or higher) connection will solve the problem. WARNING: STRONG LANGUAGE A homophobic rant from the man who tried to savage the singer Ariana Grande at a concert in Manchester has been revealed in court. Mohammed Abedi stabbed 22-year-old Ariana Grande in the neck and face in May 2018 in the foyer of Manchester Arena during a concert. Abedi, who is originally from Manchester, admitted the attack and was jailed for 22 years on July 16. Read More: Abedi had also previously been convicted of attempting to murder British soldier Lee Rigby. On Monday, the man behind the attack spoke openly in court about his sexuality and beliefs for the first time, which have been heavily reported on. In court, Abedi said: "I'm going to tell you the truth about my sexuality." "I prefer to do what I do with men not with women. "I was born in this country, this is my home, it's a great country but I'm not what they call a racist. "I prefer men not with women. "Why? Because they are different. I don't believe in this kind of thing." He added: "In this country you can marry anyone. But I'm not with anyone. "I have my opinion and that is my life and I don't want to change or tell you that something that I'm not." Abedi has been accused of inciting hatred against non-Muslims, Muslims and the LGBT community and other offences. Read More: He is a member of the terror cell that carried out a co-ordinated attack on London Bridge and Borough Market in March 2017. Abedi said he was inspired by the 2017 terror attack in Manchester in which 22 people died after supporters of a banned terror group rampaged across the city following the Manchester Arena terrorist attack. Two days after the attack, Abedi wrote on Facebook that he was "proud to be a Manc" and that "the Manchester one was just a baby". Abedi said he had no interest in Muslim women. He said: "I don't like Muslim women, I am a man, I like men, and I believe that Islam is a hate religion 6d1f23a050
