The technique is used to make fondant — soft, gooey icing used for wedding and other celebrations. To create the effect, a food thermometer is used, to read the temperature as the soft fondant is worked on a wooden spoon. The temperature rises to and can remain at that temperature for a long time as the soft fondant is worked and manipulated. Once the temperature reaches the fondant is ready to use. This is done by mixing a fixative with the fondant. Fondants are usually mixed in small batches and with a heat resistant spatula. Using pots with a tight-fitting lid, can be achieved. This allows the pots to be filled quickly. Instant melting is also used to clarify icing (icing sugar mixed with water) by heating the icing until it reaches the temperature.
