detective chris gates is a hard-boiled man. ill find him, he says, if he cant find the murderers. in the age of the internet, e-mail, texting, and whatever its called, its hard to shake off leads like this. theres a combination of google searches, checking data. and police records that led to a san diego apartment. on a tuesday night in february 1999, the detective had an appointment with christopher caruso. caruso, a 28-year-old porter at the hotel, had vanished the night before, along with $9,000 that had been stolen from his boss, warren rhodes. the case had been mostly a dead end, as was often the case when a child went missing, especially in california. ive arrested these guys in the past, caruso had told the detective. theyve had warrants out on them. theyre drug dealers. but the records indicated nothing. the detective went back to the hotel to begin a new line of inquiries. the last call that caruso had made was to his fianc?e, lynette segovia. i was wondering if you could tell me where caruso was right before he disappeared, the detective said. segovia hesitates, looking off to the side, and then hesits some more. i thought if i told you, hes probably going to try to harm me. she wants me to talk to him, caruso, because hes been upsetting me. hes been doing a lot of things i dont like, she said. theres no record of when the detective was scheduled to talk to caruso, but apparently he was too late to meet him. the next day, segovia was dead, apparently murdered by her estranged husband. she was 21 years old and pregnant. her body was found in a wooded area about six miles from the hotel, ten days after she called caruso. the police never found caruso, nor did they find the drug money that had vanished in an apartment off a busy intersection in downtown san diego. they never arrested anyone in connection with the case. but the detectives were convinced of his guilt. what do you think happened? caruso killed her, the detective told a small group of police officers. copyright (c) newsday inc. all rights reserved. please print this story or link to this page.

to explain them to the vendor. anyway, this is my way. i was able to fix these problems and hopefully other people will be able to do it as well. anyways, here are the steps to follow: 1 - go to the vendor's website and search for a document you have problem with. this can be a module or a data set. it can be from any vendor. 2 - this. there is usually a log file that stores all the query and the results of that query. it helps a lot to search for the log that explains the problems. 3 - you should try to understand the query. usually the query shows the problem. 5ec8ef588b
