Yes, that's right. you can get the MS Office Pro package for free after signing-up with your email address. You can get Office for Windows XP, Vista, Home Server, 32-bit and 64-bit. Once you have signed up, download your free Office in two parts. First, you can download your file with one click and the second click sends your file to your email. Let's see if your language is available. You can choose your language after the first download. After the first download, you can keep your free subscription from renewing for a longer period. If you would rather get Office Business and Home Premium 2008 in both 32 and 64-bit, Office Home and Student 2011 in both 32 and 64-bit, Office Mobile 2010 in both 32 and 64-bit and your activated Office 2010 for three years, Office Professional Plus 2010 in both 32 and 64-bit, Office Pro Plus 2016 in both 32 and 64-bit, and Office Home and Student 2016 in both 32 and 64-bit, you can download Office Ultimate 2016 in both 32 and 64-bit, Office Home and Student 2016 in both 32 and 64-bit, Office Professional 2016 in both 32 and 64-bit, Office Home and Student 2016 in both 32 and 64-bit. Plus, if your language is available, you can choose to not renew. No, you cannot get Office 2010 Standard or Home Premium on Windows 8 and Windows 8.1. Here's the breakdown: OK, so I went to the software center to download Office Pro Plus 2015 in the Italian language. I'm also attempting to find and upload the Microsoft Office download for Mac. I have used the link to download Office for a previous blog, and it went fine. It was going to take time, since I only had a connection of 256 Kbps. I was fine until I started to install. After 20 minutes or so, it stopped at a half way mark. It was like it was just sitting there, then just disappeared. I think it was trying to install the language package. So I just moved on to the microsoft office download for Mac.
