To clarify, this can be done with a loop like this: regex = r"^(.)$" for x in range(0, 100): match = re.match(regex, "abcdef") if match: do_something() I have some code that looks something like this: regex = r"^(.)$" for x in range(0, 100): match = re.match(regex, "abcdef") if match: do_something() regex = re.sub(regex, r"\1", "abcdef") I'm looking for some way that this can be done without the extra lines of code and, in particular, without the need for the regex variable to be a list. A: With the updated question, this is perfect: regex = r"^(.*)$"
